Brief Report about the One day Workshop on "Probability, Statistics & Queuing Theory" held on 19th November 2016 at Vidyavardhaka College of Engineering, Mysuru.

- By Stanley Pradeep DSouza, Asst.Prof, Dept. of CSE, AIET.

Department of CSE of VVCE Mysuru conducted the special one day workshop on "Probability, Statistics & Queuing Theory" to particularly help the student and faculty community to tackle the subject which goes by the same name as that of this workshop, that is being newly introduced for the PG students under the CBCS scheme in VTU. The workshop started with the brief overview of the aforementioned series of topics given in the brochure such as probability, random process, markov chain etc., to the participants. The program aimed to represent various subjects constituting the title of the event. Talks focussed on the progress made in Applied Probability and Statistics, queuing theory, numerical and simulation methods, and applications ranging from finance, biology and medicine, inverse problem in engineering to cryptography.

The main goal of the workshop consisted in sharing and discussing important topics both from exam and research point of view, in preparing well for the VTU MTech exam by making note of all the import formulas and referring other mathematical textbooks related to the topics. About 55 participants attended the workshop. Topics discussed were Probability, Random process, Theory of Distributions, Time Series and Stochastic Processes, Probability and Statistics in Cryptology, Queuing Models. The talks of the workshop presented various recent developments in applied probability and statistics.

External Speaker:

Prof. Sundarapandian Vaidyanathan, Professor and Dean of the Research and Development Centre at Vel Tech University, Chennai who has obtained his D.Sc. degree in Electrical and Systems Engineering from Washington University, St. Louis, USA in May 1996.
